

Remarkable Representation

GLP Attorneys redefines personal injury law by consistently delivering outstanding legal representation and demanding just results.

Mentorship at work: Cydney Campbell Webster and Kaitlin Roach, Leadership & Development Director, working on the 2024 internship and mentorship programs.

A Meaningful Legacy

Webster's decision to practice personal injury law stemmed from childhood, when her mother endured a traumatic brain injury. "My mom didn't have good attorney advocacy and suffered needlessly because of it," says Webster. "It drove me to help protect people and their rights."

This path led her to GLP Attorneys, where she started her personal injury career. "For over 30 years, I've been able to make an impact for my clients, helping them overcome the terrible experiences they've been through," she continues.

As a shareholder, Webster wears many hats. She assists her clients while also supporting firm employees, ensuring their future success. She currently heads GLP Attorneys' leadership and development committee, providing attorney training and mentorship.

"I enjoy helping people learn and develop skills in the legal industry so we can all do what we do best," says Webster. She also takes an active role in identifying new markets to promote the firm's continued expansion. With many small, underserved areas in need of personal injury representation, GLP Attorneys hopes to bring the expertise of its accomplished attorneys to communities in need.

"The legacy of our firm is to stand the test of time long after the current shareholders have retired," says Webster. "We want to continue helping people for generations to come."

GLP Attorneys can't be found on the billboards or buses of Seattle or anywhere in the Pacific Northwest. Instead, the personal injury law firm relies on its reputation to attract clients in a saturated market, which has led to exponential growth since its founding in 1986.

GLP Attorneys began with two shareholders who were determined to change the personal injury landscape for the better. Today, the firm is home to 36 attorneys, 150 employees, and 10 fully staffed offices around Washington state. The team's dedication to clients sets them apart from competition, leading to a steady stream of referrals from former clients, employees, other attorneys, and community health care providers.

"I'm proud of the firm we've created and continue to develop; it's very exciting," says Cydney Campbell Webster, shareholder.

“The legacy of our firm is to stand the test of time long after the current shareholders have retired. We want to continue helping people for generations to come.”

Representing clients through both trials and appeals, GLP Attorneys handles a variety of claims, from motor vehicle and bicycle collisions to serious construction injuries and wrongful death. Excellence is the goal, regardless of the size or complexity of a case.

"Each of our clients gets the same level of attention," says Webster. "Our firm operates under the universal core values of commitment, collaboration, creativity, and compassion to provide the service that clients deserve."

The GLP Attorneys shareholder team from left to right: Jonathan Yousling, Janelle Carney Boston, Heather Webb, Sara Maleki, Jim Gooding, Sean Ayres, John Webber, Cydney Campbell Webster, and Alex French.

PERSONAL INJURY
ATTORNEYS

2601 4th Avenue, 6th Floor
Seattle, WA 98121
866-747-8020

glpattorneys.com